U.S. immigration law requires F-1 students to notify International Student Services immediately about any change to their academic program. These changes must be reported to SEVIS. Failure to report academic program changes including a change of major to International Student Services can put a students immigration status at risk.

Students must get approval from their academic advisor AND meet with an international student advisor.